ROOSEVELT MAY BE FORCED INTO INFLATION

Senator Fess Speaks On "New Deal"

"PRINTING MONEY TO PAY BILLS INEVITABLE"

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received November 26, 10.25 a.m.)

Shanghai, To-day.
Senator Simeon D. Fess, Ohio Republican, yesterday said that the "New Deal" would end as soon as the Government was no longer able to flood the country with cash.
He forecasted that President Roosevelt would be reluctantly forced into inflation.
"He is caught in a swirl of economic forces stronger than himself, necessitating decisions as he goes along," he said. "The day is inevitable when he will have to start printing money to pay the bills. Then, inflation will be beyond stopping." — United Press, per S. E. Levy and Co.

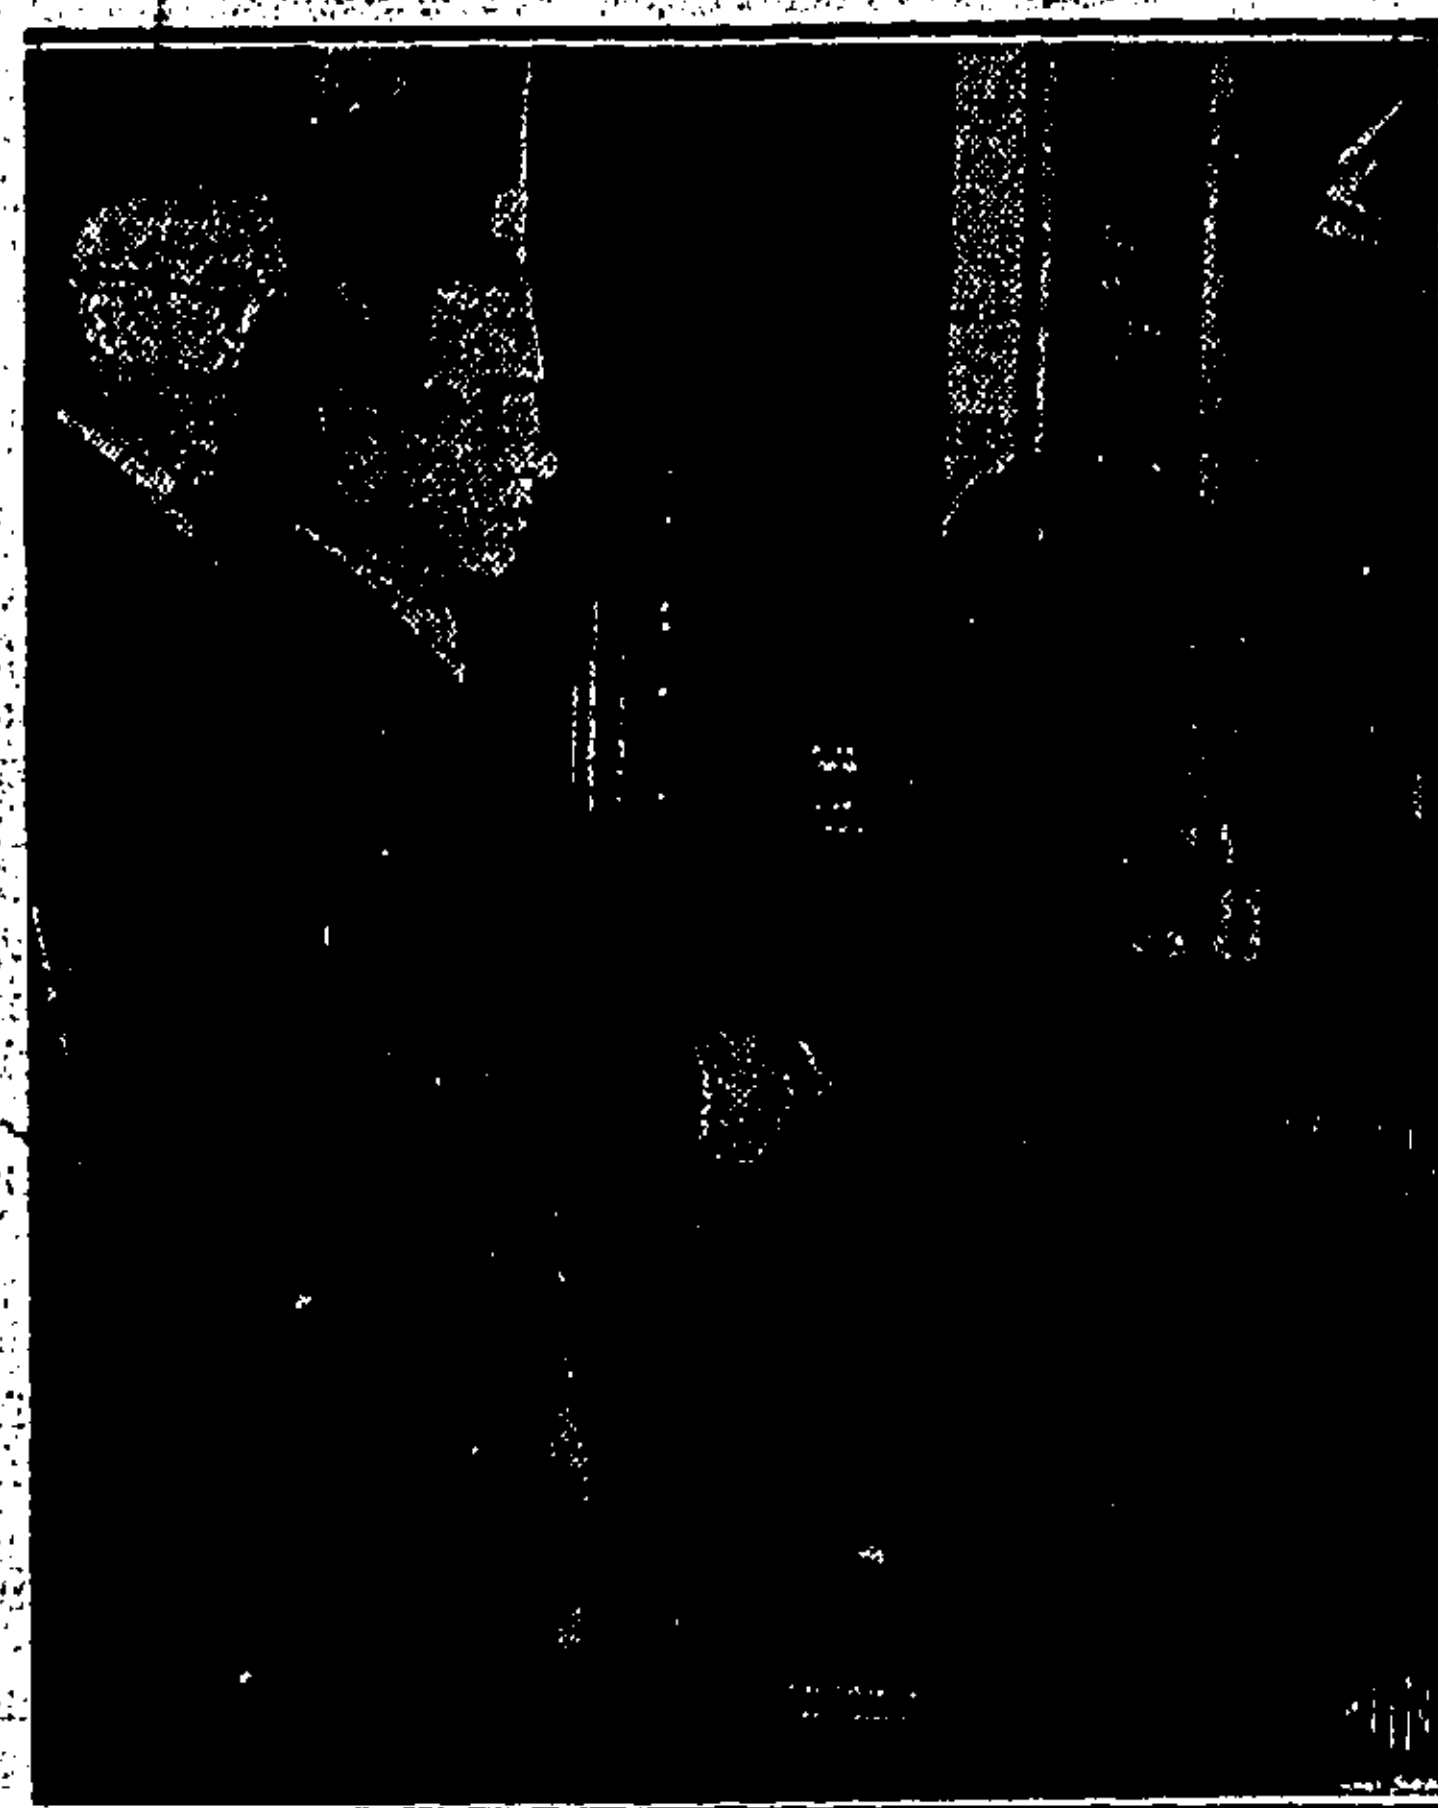

Returning safely to earth after a 10-mile flight into the stratosphere, Dr. Jean Picard, right, is pictured handing the barograph for the flight to Deputy Sheriff Oscar Weinberg, for shipment to Washington, where it will be checked. Picard and his pilot-wife, Jeanette, landed their stratosphere balloon in a wooded section near Cadiz, O.

GERMAN ORDER DIRECT HIT AT FOREIGN COMPANIES

Only 10 Marks Daily From Coupons

NEW CURRENCY CHECK

Berlin, To-day.
"Produce articles of military value or there will be no foreign currencies for you," is the gist of the German foreign control authorities, which provides that 10 marks daily is the utmost to be placed at the disposal of foreigners from coupons falling due.
German business men are finding it extremely difficult to obtain currencies, not only for imports, but for advertising abroad.
One foreign firm, makers of household machinery, which was unable to decide to produce goods for "defensive purposes," was refused currency. Firms whose business depends on foreign patents are unable to secure money to pay their patent fees. — Reuter.

CHURCH-STATE BREACH GROWS WIDER IN REICH

RELIGIOUS ORGAN CONFISCATED

BLOW AT NAZI PRIMATE

Berlin, To-day.
The latest development in the Church dispute in Germany was the confiscation yesterday, by the police, of Reichsbishop Mueller's organ, "The Gospel in the Third Reich," owing to the publication of an article by the Reichsbishop demanding that every means be used by German Christians to attain their aim.
"Martin Luther did not fight with palm leaves and peace songs," the article stated.

ROOSEVELT IS NOW BECOMING LESS RADICAL

MOVES OFFSET BY CONSERVATISM

LIBERAL LIMIT REACHED

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received November 26, 10.25 a.m.)
Washington, To-day.
There are indications that President Roosevelt has gone about as liberal as he intends to go.
In connection with the businessmen's efforts to decide whether the President is becoming more or less radical, observers point out the recent record, which, they claim, shows that the "New Deal" is following a middle course in which the conservative trends offset the radical moves.
The Administration's most radical move is the drive against utilities, including the investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. (Continued on Page 12)

Spelling the collapse of Catalonia's revolution for independence, President Luis Companys, above, and other leaders of the Catalanian secession were arrested by Spanish government troops at Barcelona, and faced a court-martial.

RUSSIA'S GOLD SOURCES

Reported Practically Inexhaustible

HUGE PROFIT ON SHIPMENT TO AMERICA

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received November 26, 10.25 a.m.)

New York, To-day.
Amstorg (American Trading Organization) officials state that Russia should be able to ship 45,000 tons of gold ore to the United States in the next 12 months, bringing Russia a profit conservatively estimated at U.S.$6,000,000 which would be appreciable as interest on possible credits.
Some American engineers characterize Russia's gold sources as practically inexhaustible, especially in Siberia. — United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

SILVER "CAMP" DISSENSION

DISAGREEMENT IN PROCEDURE ON INFLATION

THOMAS-McCARRAN DEADLOCK

FREE COINAGE PROPOSAL OPPOSED

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received November 26, 10.25 a.m.)
Washington, To-day.
A split among the United States silver "Camp" is apparent due to a disagreement in programme.
Senators Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, and Patrick A. McCarran, of Nevada who are conferring on inflationary proposals, only agree that there is a need for expanded currency and Government control of credit, but each has a different solution. (Continued on Page 12.)

SHREWD BORROWING IN AMERICA

Average Interest Rate Shows Big Decline

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.
New York, To-day.
The statistics of Messrs. Devine and Company, Government bond specialists, show that the United States has been a more shrewd money borrower under President Roosevelt. (Continued on Page 12.)

U.S. WHEAT CROP PRODUCTION

Excess Predicted

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received November 26, 10.25 a.m.)
Washington, To-day.
The United States Department of Agriculture foresees a possible excess production of 185,000,000 bushels of American wheat in the crop for the year 1935-36, over domestic consumption requirements. — United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

NEW TERRITORIES FOR AMERICA

200,000 Square Miles Involved

ADMIRAL BYRD'S DISCOVERY

New York, To-day.
A wireless message from Admiral Byrd, at the Little America base camp of his Antarctic Expedition, reports what is termed as conclusive evidence that Marie Byrd Land runs in an unbroken line from the Antarctic coast to the South Pole, disproving the existence of a trans-Atlantic strait as reported to President Roosevelt after Admiral Byrd's survey flight last week.
The new discoveries add approximately 200,000 square miles to the territories claimed for the United States. — Reuter.

WORLD RECORD BROKEN

Dutch Woman's Aquatic Achievement

Four bombing planes will attack the city. All lights are to be switched off, and the First Aid Corps is to be ready to render service to the "injured." At the same time, the Air Corps will send several pursuit planes to drive away the "raiders."

ROYAL WEDDING GUESTS

A Fashionable Beverage—Jewellery Novelty

(By MARIANNE MAYFAIRE)

London. Behind the scenes of the Royal Wedding a great deal of work has to be done of which the public get no notion. It has nothing to do with trousseau buying, or house furnishing, or arranging the wedding breakfast, but concerns the more delicate business of settling which of the European Royalty will attend the ceremony.

Questions of etiquette and precedence are finally settled by Court officials, but a great deal of preliminary correspondence must be done with infinite tact and patience before matters reach this final stage.

One member of the Royal family ideally suited by experience and natural gifts for this delicate task is Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone. Being a favourite in the Royal circle, she is sure of the hearty co-operation of all the young people.

Busy Princess Alice

Princess Alice is related, either by her own birth or by her marriage, with most of the Royal Houses in Europe, and that makes her task easier. At her charming country retreat she spends nearly all her time at her desk these days, conducting a correspondence with Princess Juliana of Holland, with Princess Sibylla of Sweden, and her cousins at Coburg.

It is certain that all the Scandinavian Royalties will be well represented at the wedding. Queen Maund of Norway, now on her annual visit to England, is greatly looking forward to the ceremony, as the bride is almost as nearly related to her as is Prince George himself.

To mark Princess Marina's close connection with Denmark, opinions are, it is understood, being canvassed in the Royal family as to the possibility of having the Danish Crown Prince's two tall young sons in the bridal retinue.

Welsh Gold For Ring?

The young Royal couple will soon be occupying themselves with the question of a wedding ring. Gold washed from a little stream in Wales was used for the wedding rings of the Princess Royal and the Duchess of York.

As Princess Marina's engagement ring is set in platinum, however, it is more than likely that she will follow the example of the Hon. Mrs. Chaplin and other recent brides who possess two wedding rings, one platinum and one gold, to be worn with the appropriate jewellery. One may be used at the Abbey service and one at the Greek Church service in the Palace.

Very ring-boxes for the ring not in use were made for Lady Dufferin and Lady Veronica Hornby by Major Woodhouse, and studded with the birthstones of the bride and bridegroom.

"Crown Jewels"

The "crown" jewellery which was designed specially for spring, 1935, in anticipation of the nation's desire to honour the King's anniversary of his accession is, I understand, now enjoying a "little season" of favour occasioned by the announcement of the Royal engagement and forthcoming wedding.

The crown motif is already appearing in earrings and pendants. These designs are being sent to Australia and South Africa, for the Colonies are planning celebrations to mark the King's jubilee.

A natural development from the crown theme inspired by early Victorian modes is the new jewellery rather reminiscent of the later Victorian period which is now being planned by the same young designer.

DYED FURS

Paris.

Dyed fur has already been used in the summer collections and will no doubt, be featured even more for the autumn costume. Blue, either in navy or a dark Delft shade is the favourite colour. Silver fox dyed a deep, rich blue is a favourite trimming for the dressy afternoon coat and for the evening wrap.

BE SURE IT IS YOUR CORRECT COLOUR

If you use a complete costume of one hue be absolutely sure that everything is of exactly the same hue; and certainly be sure that it is your correct colour. Usually you will find a dash of another colour, either harmonising or complementary makes a more interesting outfit.

COFFEE AND WHIPPED CREAM

COFFEE with whipped cream and honey instead of sugar for sweetening makes a refreshing change.

EVENING DRESS HAS NO TIGHTNESS

Metallic Frocks With Delightful Wraps

CHIFFON BLOUSES

London.

The new evening dress chiefly favoured by Paris is undoubtedly the one which admits of no tightness below the level of the hip-line.

The skirt may be just comfortably full or enormously wide; the fullness may hang softly or in stiff folds; while the cut may be circular or straight.

In short, the skirt can do almost anything it likes as long as it suggests flowing lines.

The corsage is often cut very low in front and at the back, and sleeves are a feature of the mode.

These may be very imposing (huge "peasant" affairs or those of mediæval cut), or plain; tight-fitting ones coming well down over the hands.

These may be very imposing of mediæval cut, or plain, tight-fitting ones coming well down over the hands.

Many London designers have, generally speaking created their evening models to follow the lines of the figure nearly to the knees—where a certain amount of fullness springs out at the back into a train.

The "Mermala" Type

Even where tunics are used this outline is kept, as far as possible, unbroken.

Some London houses show gowns of the "mermaid" type in very clever sequin and pailletted designs. In spite of their long trains, these skirts are often so narrow that they have to be slit in front.

Some of these metallic frocks have delightful little wraps of matching tulle or chiffon which are amazingly effective over the glitter of the sequins.

English designers seem to have excelled themselves over the type of outfit that is so much loved by French and American women—the restaurant costume.

A number of these have been seen in black or dark-coloured velvet with narrow, instep-length skirts and simple jackets or caped coats.

The white or pale-coloured chiffon blouses that complete these suits are the loveliest things imaginable—generally mounted on lace-trimmed foundations of flesh-coloured georgette.

The Smaller Hats

London.

The smaller hats have a tendency toward an oval shape with the narrow part at the front. Maria Guy takes the motif of the Scotch Highlanders' cap for her latest models, pinching both the crown and the brim into a point at the front. One model, is of soft, black felt with a flat, narrow brim raised at one side with a long plume of green coq feathers drooping underneath.

YELLOW HAIR AND SEA AIR

Women with white hair often find that sea air makes it turn an unattractive yellow, and this is now easily corrected by the use of a bleaching solution in the rinsing water after the shampoo. A tonic for the hair that has been in use since the nineties is made in a special colourless form for the use of women with white and grey hair, and in two strengths, one for dry hair and one for greasy.

ALWAYS USE THE SOFT TONES

If your eyes are hazel and you want them to look more brown they can be made deeper or paler by the shades worn in contrast, such as the golds, olives, yellow-browns and greens. But always use the soft tones, no matter what the colour. You can use these colours either as a foundation colour or as a vivid touch. Then they may be a trifle stronger.

"JUNGLE TRAP"—KING'S THEATRE

A drama of the Malay jungle, and woman-starved adventures, is Paramount's current offering, "Jungle Trap" featuring Charles Laughton, Carole Lombard and Charles Rickford, now at the King's Theatre.

The film, based on a play by Norman Reilly Raine and Frank Buller, centres around a lone white woman who seeks a livelihood by plunging into the Malay jungle. Coveted by Laughton, she overlord of the natives, she accompanies him to the old houseboat, far in the jungle, which is his home and trading post.

Thrown into this "last stop from hell" the only white woman in the rendezvous of a broken ruler, nevertheless, fights with all her womanly instincts to redeem Kent Taylor, young, handsome member of Laughton's band.

And the strange romance between this lone, white woman and the man who has lost his soul in this legion of the damned, furnishes the substance of the story.

"MADAME DU BARRY"—ALHAMBRA THEATRE

The dark beauty of Dolores Del Rio shines through Edward Chodorov's famous character, the favourite of King Louis XV, whose love affairs were the scandals of French pre-revolutionary days in Europe. In Warner Brothers' current release, "Madame Du Barry," now at the Alhambra Theatre.

The film deals with Madame Du Barry's intimate life and loves, rather than with her political intrigues, although there are clashes between herself and the jealous court ladies and courtiers who seek to destroy her influence over the king.

In addition to the beautiful dances, reproductions of the Palace of Versailles, the Court and the Gardens of the Colonades are among the gorgeous settings for this spectacular film.

Reginald Owen plays the role of King Louis XV, Victor Jory is the powerful d'Aiguillon, Henry O'Neill is Duc de Choiseul, Verree Teasdale is the Duchess de Grammont, Osgood Perkins is Cardinal Richelieu, and Anita Louise is Marie Antoinette.

"HIDE-OUT"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

The story of the reformation of a playboy racketeer is told in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's romantic drama, "Hide-Out," featuring Robert Montgomery and Maureen O'Sullivan, now at the Queen's Theatre.

Robert Montgomery plays one of his most whimsical roles as "Lucky" Wilson, the racketeer who, driven from his favoured New York haunts by the relentlessness of the law, realizes he has not discovered life and love until he finds himself nestling in the bosom of a simple farmer's family. Witford Kane for 30 years one of the leading character actors of the London and New York stage, carries off signal honours as Farmer Miller.

Elizabeth Patterson, veteran "screen mother" appears as Maureen's mother, and Mickey Rooney, 12-year-old comedian, is seen as her mischievous and inquisitive younger brother.

Others in the cast are Edward Arnold, C. Henry Gordon, Edward Brophy and Muriel Evans.

"LOVE ON WHEELS"—STAR THEATRE

"Love on Wheels," now showing at the Star Theatre, is a quick-moving comedy, full of racy humour and charming song numbers. Jack, Hulbert, the popular English star, is featured in this picture and his famous grin and spontaneous fooling provide some way of entertainment. He is seen as a shop assistant and his job is a precarious one, for each complaint from a customer means a threat of dismissal. One day, however, he astonishes his manager by leaving.

Jack Hulbert is supported by a brilliant cast including Gordon, Harlow, Edmund Gwenn and Leonora Corbett.

AVOIDING A FORCE

by Ely Culbertson.

It is a sound general principle in playing a hand with only four trumps that, if possible, either the closed hand or the Dummy trump holding should be left intact.

In other words, the play should be so planned as to avoid, if possible, forcing both hands. It may be necessary to use trumps generally in the Dummy to ruff losers—but if this is true, then the Declarer should think long and earnestly before forcing his own hand as well.

The hand below, which was played in a recent tournament, is a good example of careful planning of the play in order that the contract may be fulfilled. Silphoid methods will not avail as there are plenty of pitfalls for those who are not reasonably careful in the timing of their plays.

Of course, South's hand is a bare minimum but the tendency is very strong, particularly at tournaments, to open any minimum hand, regardless of the elements of favour or unfavourable distribution. North's Takeout and his subsequent raise to four hearts after South had assisted his spade suit comes as a matter of course.

West's Opening lead was the diamond King and, granted the 8-2 break in trumps, the hand did not appear to present any particular difficulties from the standpoint of the Declarer. He felt that he might have to concede a trick in trumps, a trick in spades and a trick in clubs.

The first trick, of course, was won with the Ace in Dummy and in order to take the finesse in the spade suit a small trump was led at once. When East played the Jack, signs of danger were apparent. It seemed probable now that the West might have four trumps to the Queen. However, that was a situation which could be dealt with later. A small spade was led, and the finesse of the Jack lost to East's King.

East at this point had no good return. To lead a club would be to forfeit the trick to the De-clarer, and to lead a heart would be to clear with the establishment of that suit. A diamond return would

FURS BY AIR FROM FAR NORTH

Season's Saving In Canada

REINDEER REPLACED BY SOVIET PLANES

Fur traders are making ever greater use of aeroplanes to bring their goods to market. During the past few years the number of planes transporting pelts from the farthest outposts of Northern Canada and North Russia has been constantly increasing.

An official of Canadian Airways, who is at present in London, stated that his organisation is preparing to deal on a larger scale than ever before with consignments of furs which will be flown South during the coming winter to catch the market while the demand is still strong.

Mr. J. Chadwick Brooks, secretary of the Hudson Bay Company, said that while "planes" would never entirely replace dog teams and water transport in the more rugged parts of Northern Canada, they were rendering a great service over areas where routes had been established.

SOUTH CHINA "B" GIVE GLORIOUS DISPLAY AGAINST EAST LANCES

JOHNSON LEADS POLICE TO EASY WIN OVER GUNNERS

REVEALS TRUE FORM WITH THREE GOALS

ARTILLERY FIGHT PLUCKILY BUT LACK FINISH

(By "TOOVER")

In a poor, but evenly matched, encounter on the Railway ground yesterday, the Police secured full points from the Artillery by 4 goals to 1 in their First Division League Football encounter.

The defences on both sides were given plenty to do, and the Artillery full-backs were hopelessly spreadeagled during the second half when the Police forwards enjoyed most of the play. Brooks, who played a good game in defence for the Police, was unlucky in giving the Artillery their only goal when, in attempting to clear, he deflected the ball into his own net.

Johnson, who has regained his true form this season, was the outstanding forward on display. His shooting was good, but in Durham he met an outstandingly good custodian. Had it not been for Durham's brilliant display in the second half the Police might have increased their tally.

Gunnery Lack Finish

The Artillery forwards displayed good combination, but were much too slow in getting off the mark—their finishing lacked the necessary sparkle to culminate in goals. On numerous occasions they came to within an ace of scoring, but their shooting was weak and the inside forwards were too intent on trying to walk the ball into the net instead of considering their other colleagues.

Although the score indicates a one-sided encounter, the exchanges were fairly even and the play extremely fast on occasion. The opening half opened at a fast pace and Johnson thrilled the spectators with a spectacular drive which shaved the crossbar with Durham unplaced.

At the other end Parade sent a glorious pass to Barraclough, who taking the ball in his stride, sent in a powerful shot to the top left corner, but Perkins dived—full-length to turn the ball round the upright for a fruitless corner.

Police Open Scoring

Johnson opened the scoring with a good goal after taking a beautiful centre from T. Pile and rushing between Clancy and Hopkins to score with a fast grounder. The Artillery retaliated, but the Police defence were too good for them and relieved pressure with ease.

A few minutes later Johnson scored his second goal when he cut in, towards goal, following a solo run, to beat Durham with a fine drive.

Just before the interval the Artillery defence were kept in their own goalmouth, but Durham and his two backs came off best against Johnson and his forwards.

Moss Scores Good Goal

In the opening minutes of the second half the Police went further ahead when Moss cleverly took a pass from Brooks to net with a fast rising drive.

GEARY TO REMAIN WITH LEICESTERSHIRE

George Geary, who played for England against Australia in the Test matches last season, has decided not to entertain the offer made to him by Burnley, the Lancashire League club, but to remain with Leicester.

DEFENCE TRIUMPHS DESPITE GRUELLING TEST

SOLDIERS SECURE ADVANTAGE AFTER INTERVAL BUT FAIL TO SCORE

SWAIN SEEN AT BEST AT FULL-BACK

(By "Touch Judge")

DISPLAYING SUPERIORITY IN ALL DEPARTMENTS AND GIVING AN EXCELLENT DISPLAY OF FOOTBALL, SOUTH CHINA "B" FURTHER ENHANCED THEIR POSITION IN THE PREMIER LEAGUE WHEN THEY DEFEATED THE EAST LANCES BY TWO CLEAR GOALS ON THE SOOKUNPOO MILITARY GROUND YESTERDAY. THE WINNERS WERE FULL VALUE FOR THEIR WIN, THOUGH THEIR DEFENCE WAS SUBJECTED TO A GRUELLING TEST FROM WHICH IT CAME THROUGH WITH FLYING COLOURS.

South China quickly dominated play and set up a series of determined attacks which were eventually rewarded with two goals. The passing between the South China halves and forwards was the feature of the game.

Lack of understanding among the inside forwards, coupled with bad luck was responsible for the East Lanes not scoring in the second half when they enjoyed most of the play until, in the closing minutes, South China, encouraged by the unsuccessful efforts of the soldiers, broke away to place the issue beyond doubt.

SMITH IN LIMELIGHT

The soldiers quickly settled that they did not find the net at all easy. O'Donnell was being very badly marked by Lee Kam, and was sent through by Power on several occasions in the first stages of the game, but he could make little impression on Yiu Hing-yuen, South China's redoubtable left-back. In fact, Cheng Chi-ying, the right-back, and Wong Wa-kai, in goal, played a great defensive game throughout, covering each other's movements and presenting a far too solid front for the liking of the opposing hard-working forward line.

South China seem particularly well blessed with defenders, and it is undoubtedly to these players that most of the credit must go for their successes, as the forwards, although brilliant in their passing and approach work, often wasted opportunities by dilly-dallying in front of goal.

Tong Kwan, Lam Tak-po, and Lee Kam, South China's halves, were an extremely effective combination, though during the second half, they were sorely pressed by the determined efforts of their opponents. Their quickness in keeping up with the ball, gave South China an additional three forwards, greatly increasing their scoring potentialities, whilst during any pressure on their goal, the forwards were always to be found assisting the backs.

This was particularly noticeable when a corner kick, or free kick, was being taken against them, and proved a barrier which opposing forwards found difficult to pass.

Young Outstanding

All the forwards were on form, and if anyone stood out above the others it was Young. Shui-yick, whose speed, accurate passing, and opportunism, always kept danger to the East Lanes' goal. The combination and positioning of the forward line as a whole spoke volumes for the careful training and coaching in methodical and forceful play.

On the other hand, the soldiers showed little method in their play. They were keen and bustling, and by their sheer determination held the upper hand during the greater portion of the second half. But erratic passing, bad positioning, and perhaps above all, during the hectic second half struggle, bad luck, were responsible for the fact

Tuley's Wild Shooting

Tuley, on the left wing, apart from excellent corner-kicks, was hardly up to standard, and lost several chances by wild shooting when a centre would have been of more use. Lawton, who played at left-half during the first half, was a thrustful and untiring worker, but could not get past Cheng Chi-ying and Yiu Hing-yuen.

The best forward was O'Donnell; he seized on every chance that was going, and found the centre on numerous occasions, but it was seldom that all the remaining forwards were up to take his passes. Power and Smith were the pick of the halves, the latter in particular playing a splendid game. He kept Tsang King-ki subdued practically throughout, and found time to get his forwards away with many well-judged passes.

The defence was fairly sound, though Swain and Gorman did not combine well, the latter failing at times to cover Swain's movements. Swain had a hard game and came through well. His quickness in clearing the ball, and determined tackling were a feature of his play. Oxford was very safe in goal, and apart from the first goal, which appeared to slip out of his hands, he made several fine saves in the closing stages.

South China's first goal came mid-way through the first period. After a series of well schemed attacks, the ball came over from Li Shek-yau into the centre, and was seized on by Tsang King-ki who sent in a hard low drive. Oxford seemed to hold it, but it slipped past him into the net.

The East Lanes fought back from the kick-off, and O'Donnell went near with a good shot, which was well saved by Wong. South China were the more polished side, and deserved their lead.

Soldiers Turn Tables

For the greater part of the second period, the Lanes had all the game, but could not get the ball into the net, try as they did. Tuley missed two openings by weak shooting, and Lawton once trapped the ball and turned on his heel to send in a fast shot which unfortunately went outside. Following a free-kick, Lawton got his head to the ball and it rebounded off the crossbar with

Keen Struggles Witnessed In Kowloon Golf Championship

The Championship of the Kowloon Golf Club has now reached the semi-final stage, and some interesting and keen encounters were decided in the Second Round, which was concluded yesterday.

After a very evenly matched game A. T. Braley accounted for W. Taylor by 2 and 1, and A. W. da Rosa defeated W. Groves by 4 and 2. R. K. Collings and D. C. Wilson had a keen struggle to claim entry into the semi-final. After a four match Wilson was successful by one hole, returning a 74 to Collings' 75.

The last match of the draw provided an interesting tussle between H. E. Mundy and A. Allebrook. Both were inclined to be erratic in the early stages of the game, but Mundy eventually gained the upper hand and stood three up at the 12th. Showing his true form, however, Allebrook stood one down at the 17th and won the 18th to square the match. A half at the 19th carried

NEGOTIATIONS IN HAND

Manila, Nov. 20. Officials of the Manila Bay Baseball League are negotiating with the Tokyo collegiate baseball officials to bring to Manila a Japanese Varsity nine for a series of games with the local teams between December 15 and January 15. The original plan was to have the Nipponese team come to Manila during the Carnival, but the Tokyo baseball authorities suggested that they would prefer to send a team here in December.

If present negotiations do not miscarry either the Hosei University clubsters or the Big Six champions or the Waseda team, may come to Manila for the proposed series. In the event that these teams are not available either the Kelo or the Meiji nines may be invited to play here.

There is also a plan to send the local baseball talent to Japan during the summer vacation, but this depends upon the result of the present negotiations to bring here a Varsity baseball outfit from the Nippon Empire.

The proposed series between the local nine and the Japanese team will be played in the Rizal Memorial Baseball Stadium, if they are held here.

FAMOUS YACHT TO BE REPAIRED

Original "America" At Annapolis

Washington. The famous yacht America, whose victory in the Royal Squadron Regatta off Cowes, England, in 1851, resulted in the establishment of the America's Cup races, is to be extensively repaired by the navy to prevent further deterioration.

The yacht now is at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, where she was taken in 1921, after being purchased by the Federal Government for one dollar from Charles H. W. Foster of Boston. Foster sold the vessel for that price with the understanding that the Government would maintain her in good condition.

The Secretary for the Navy, Mr. Claude Swanson, said bids for the work had been requested and would be opened shortly. The extent of the work to be done will be determined by the prices set in the bids. Bidding has been asked on two schedules—one including repairs to the hull and the other including restoration of the upper part.

If the first schedule is carried out the vessel will remain on exhibition at the academy. If the second schedule is carried out, she will be able to move under sail and may make trips at various times. Associated Press.

VETERAN BOXER'S CHALLENGE TO PETERSON

Chicago Cubs Scout
For Dean Bros.
$250,000 In Cash Reputed
Offer To Cardinals

Chicago, Nov. 17.
It was reported to-day that the Chicago Cubs are negotiating for the purchase of the famous Dean brothers of the St. Louis Cardinals' pitching staff, Jerome "Dizzy" and Paul "Goofy", for $250,000 in cash.
This came in the face of reports that the Cardinals, National League pennant winners and world champions in 1934, may be sold to Lew Wentz, Oklahoma oil magnate.
Although Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, said that negotiations for the sale of the club had not been consummated, Wentz virtually confirmed the transfer of the team in an interview at Oklahoma City.

The Dean brothers, the greatest baseballers for 1934, helped much in the sensational Cardinal drive toward the senior loop flag and the world's championship. Through Dizzy's and Goofy's brilliant pitching the Cardinals sprinted to double fame this year.

Dizzy and Goofy won between them the four games which enabled the Cardinals to down the Detroit Tigers in the 1934 world series by a margin of one game. Dizzy bagged two of the three games he hurled, while Goofy won the two tilts he performed in for the Red Birds in this year's classic.

With Cards Throughout
Dizzy, strike-out king of the big leagues, joined the Cardinals in 1930 and, except for 1931, when he played for the Houston club, he remained with St. Louis throughout.

In 1932 Dizzy led the National League in strike-outs and pitched the most innings. In 1933 he pitched in most games and struck out the most batters.
In was recalled that Dizzy in 1933 fanned 17 Chicago Cub batters in one game, thus establishing a record for the century.

Major League Record
Goofy, the younger of the Dean brothers, whom the Cardinals obtained in a deal with the Columbus club early this year, pitched the only no-hit, no-run game in 1934, and the first in three years in the major leagues.

The Cubs, who are anxious to obtain the services of the Dean brothers, finished in third place in the National League race this year. In 1932 they won the National League pennant.—United Press.

PIP EMMA WINS
Manchester November
Handicap

FAVOURITE UNPLACED

London, Saturday.
Pip Emma (E. Smith) won the Manchester November Handicap over 1 1/2 miles to-day when he beat Jesmondene (Cliff Richards) by 1 1/2 lengths in a field of 29 starters. Free Fare (Harry Wraggs) secured third place, half a length behind Jesmondene.

The betting was: 100-7 Pip Emma; 5-1 Jesmondene; 100-9 Free Fare.

Sans Espoir (Lowrey) and Serenita (Robertson) were scratched at the last minute. Hiken was ridden by M. Hunter, while F. Hunter took out La Sourciere, and Crouch rode Epejen.—Reuter.

Jean's Dream (Nevett) was the favourite at 5 to 1 offered and 11 to 2 taken.

JOHNSON LEADS POLICE TO EASY WIN OVER GUNNERS

The Artillery's only score resulted from a clearance by Brooks Smith, the Gunners' right wing sent in a low centre which Brooks attempted to clear with a first-time effort, but the ball glanced off his foot into his net.

Just before the end Johnson netted his third goal when Stephens made an opening from which the centre-forward made no mistake. The last minutes of the game saw the Artillery make a gallant but unavailing effort to score.

Last Saturday Diegel was runner-up to Jimmy Thompson, another American, in the Centenary Open Championship. In the other competition, Jack McLean, the Scottish champion, won the amateur title.

The Kowloon Indians' Tennis Club sprang a surprise yesterday when they beat the St. Andrew's Club by 3 goals to 2 in their Makmak Hockey Tournament match on the Police Training School ground, thus retaining their 100 per cent. record. The score at half-time was 2-0.

E. F. Fincher and Colledge gave the Saints an early two-goals lead, but Gurbachan Singh and M. Pinto equalised before the interval. Gurbachan Singh netted the decider following a corner hit in the second half.

Sporting
Chatter

(By GEOFFREY SIMPSON)

THE consternation of those who lay the odds was almost comic at the Albert Hall when Harry Mizler came tumbling from his championship pedestal.

It is not often the "wise boys" are so badly bitten. It is not often they are so aggressively businesslike at a fight.

The large "Betting strictly prohibited" notices made not the slightest impression. The moment the principals were on their stools there began a scurrying and rushing and calling of odds.

In their anxiety to lay 2 to 1 on Mizler the bookmaking gentry trod on people, obstructed their view, and generally made themselves unwelcome to those who were there to watch boxing and not to bet.

And after all the fuss they were badly stung.

OUT OF PRACTICE

I DOUBT if this ringside betting can ever be entirely suppressed, but at least the pencilers can study the comfort of others.

And they should not make so much noise when the fight is going the wrong way for them.

The odds were upset in sensational style, but I felt really sorry for Mizler. We looked in vain for the sparkling boxing which won him amateur championships and took him to the Olympic Games.

He was like a man very much out of practice, and to say that he has never relished bustling tactics such as Berg can produce is not the whole story.

MIZLER MUST WAIT

MIZLER is only 21 and there is no reason why he should not return to the game with all his old brilliance and challenge for the title anew.

But he will have to wait. Jimmy Walsh, Chester's stylist, has lodged a $200 challenge to Berg, and then there are Seaman Watson and Jimmy Stewart to be considered.

SIX MONTHS' GRACE

BERG, however, will be in no hurry to defend his crown—and I do not blame him. He is entitled to capitalise his position for a bit.

Actually he cannot be called upon to defend the championship until six months have elapsed, and he is anxious first to win the European title.

The holder of this is Gustave Humery, of France, and Jeff Dickson has promised to arrange the match shortly.

BOY-BILLIARDS STAR

THE other day I drew attention to the prowess of the school-boy billiards players, Joey Williams and Willie Milburn, 70-break makers at the age of 15.

Another one gets into the column—Jack Merrick, also 18 years old, of Hinchley, Leicestershire.

The lad handled a cue for the first time 18 months ago and has already made two breaks of 80 odd and one of 94, playing against men.

"Bear him in mind," says my informant. "Local opinion is that, at his present rate of progress, he will walk away with the boys' championship next year."

HAPPY AUSTRALIANS

WILLIAM Woodfull was presented with an urn in Perth to mark his skill and gentlemanly leadership of the Australian cricketers in England.

That is interesting enough, but more important from our point of view were Woodfull's remarks in reply to the presentation.

"Widespread hospitality was extended to the team in all parts of England," he said. "We shall never forget it and we are still thrilled by the gracious hospitality of the King and Queen when we had the honour of visiting Windsor Castle."

It is well known that when the Australians arrived there were some what doubtful of the reception they would get after the body-line business during Jardine's tour. "It is good to know that these doubts were so wrongly and completely dispelled."

He provides the key to the heavyweight situation, as has been the case for the past twelve months, and his appearance on any bill this season will assure success for promotion. Peterson is 28 years of age. Cook will be 37 next January.

COOK EARNS CHANCE

The wonder Australian veteran has been manoeuvred into one of the most important fights of his lengthy career by the astute management of Harry Levene.

It may seem a poor reflection on the class of English heavy-weights that the title fight chance has come to Cook.

Although it is not possible to forecast any other result than a win for the champion, there is no denying that Cook has earned his chance.

He gave Petersen a great fight at Cardiff last year and has proved his superiority over the rest of the challengers.

Condition and an inherent love of a fight has kept Cook in the forefront of British boxing all these years. He means to keep there as long as he can.

Petersen will defeat him. Nothing but a miracle can bring about any other result. But while Cook has the remotest of chances to effect the surprise of surprises, he will be full of fight.

SCHMELING CONTEST?

It is the plan of the Peterson camp to give the champion three fights in London this season. That will complete his schedule of indoor contests.

Overtures have already been made to Max Schmeling for a fight next June with Petersen, but the odds are that the match will not take place.

Schmeling is a rich man. His purse demands are high.

What is more, he has ideas about recapturing the world heavyweight crown, which rests on the head of Max Baer so his interests at the moment are American.

The sum mentioned as Schmeling's end of the purse is $10,000.

Such a figure is out of the question, even though the fight would draw more money than has ever passed through the turnstiles in this country.

LITERARY NOTES

FLAUBERTIAN FLAVOUR

Julian Green's Study
In Psychology

DISEASES OF THE SOUL

On the cover of Mr. Julian Green's new novel, "The Dreamer," his publishers offer a definite challenge to the reviewer. They write: "In this book the reader will find nothing that is cheerful and little that is normal. It will be unjustly criticised on this score."

That is perfectly true, and it is time someone said it. To a certain type of mind anything that is not quite normal is not quite nice. I have seen novels of the highest quality dismissed simply with the word "morbid" as if "morbid" were some term of reproach. Mr. Green's book is quite definitely "morbid," for it deals with diseases of the soul—and that is all that "morbid" means, when all is said and done.

Decidedly Flaubertian. Mr. Green's publishers further compare him with Flaubert, and for once the bracketing is not inapt, writes Francis Isles in the "Daily Telegraph." There is a decidedly Flaubertian flavour about this study in psychology, which is based on Freud's theory of the unconscious; not only in the admirably conveyed setting of provincial France, but in the way in which our sympathy is caught on the paper for characters which would probably be antipathetic to us in real life; and that means, I suppose, that a more penetrating mind has thrust aside our prejudices.

In this novel, too, Mr. Green has borrowed a leaf that might have come off Mr. Claude Houghton's own particular tree, though it would spoil a pleasant little shock for the reader if I were to indicate more closely its shape.

Remarkable Study

Nevertheless, comparisons are only illustrative. "The Dreamer" is, like all Mr. Green's fine work, a thoroughly individual book. It is beautifully written and beautifully translated (by Vyvyan Holland); it is, to anyone interested in the very slightly abnormal in human psychology, a really remarkable study, cleverly thrown into novel form; and it is a book which every intelligent person will want to read.

NEW COMPTON MACKENZIE
BOOK ON WAY

"Prince Charlie and his Ladies" is a book by Mr. Compton Mackenzie, in which he brings together all the women who, in different ways played their parts in the life of Prince Charles Edward Stuart. Cassell's will publish this book.

ENGLAND AND THE SCOT

"The Scot in England," by John Herries McCulloch, is described by the publishers as a survey stretching back to the Roman occupation.

ALLEGED DIARY OF
THE TSARWHAT WAS RECORDED FOR MONTH OF "JULY, 1914"

PUBLISHED BY SOVIET

The Soviet authorities in Moscow have published what purports to be the late Tsar's diary for July, 1914, Old Style, covering the critical period, at the opening of the Great War. The diary is accompanied by comments and footnotes explaining inter alia that the "text of the diary has been prepared for the Press by Sergeeff, of the Special Department of Central Historical Archives."

The diary consists of very brief notes concerning chiefly the weather and unimportant everyday happenings, with little intrinsic State or human interest. For example, the entry for Sunday, July 6 (July 19 N. S.), after a reference to the weather continues:—

"Went to Kronstadt, attended church service en route. After lunch finished reading last night's papers."

For July 7/20 the diary refers briefly to the visit of President of Poincaré, whom the Tsar calls "the kindly President." "Whole morning endless visitors." "After Grigorievich's [Minister of Marine] report went at noon to the quay and inspected new radio-telegraphic station . . . later weather improved."

Austro-Serbian Crisis

The same even tone scarcely varies throughout the references to events leading up to the War. These generally appear almost interjectionally and without comment. The first mention of the Austro-Serbian crisis is dated Saturday, 12/25, and runs thus:—

"On Thursday evening Austria presented Serbia with ultimatum with demands (whereof eight are unacceptable for an independent State. Term expired to-day at 6 p.m. Talk here concerns only this."

The next reference on July 15/28: "Sabonoff informed me that Austria at noon to-day had declared war on Serbia. We dined with Olga and Arsenieff. Spent the whole evening reading and writing July 16/29: . . . played tennis: weather was splendid. But day was extraordinarily agitated. Sazonoff [Minister for Foreign Affairs] or Sukhomlinoff [Minister for War] or Yanushkevich [Chief of the General Staff] was continually calling me to the telephone. Besides I was carrying on an urgent telegraphic correspondence with Wilhelm [the German Emperor] . . . Had enjoyable swim in the sea; dined, and spent evening with Olga."

No Mention Of War Cloud. This entry does not mention the war cloud, but apparently it was oppressing the Tsar, for the next entry begins:—

"July 18/31: The day was gray: my mood was gray too. July 19/Aug. 1: . . . After lunch summoned Nicholas [the Grand Duke], informed him of his appointment as Commander-in-Chief until I joined the Army. Went to a convent with Alix [the Tsaritsa]. On returning from a walk in the evening learnt that Germany had declared war on us. Buchanan, the British Ambassador, brought a telegram from [King] George. A long time with him: put together a reply, then saw Nicholas [the Grand Duke]."

Next day the Tsar signed the declaration of war on Germany. On July 22/Aug. 4 Germany declared war on France, "directing the chief attack against her." The entry for July 23/Aug. 5 begins:—

"Good news: this morning: Britain declared war on Germany because, the latter had attacked France and without the least ceremony violated the neutrality of Luxemburg and Belgium. External campaign could not begin better for us. . . . July 24/Aug. 6: Austria at last declared war on us. Now the position is quite definite."

For the following days till the end of July (Aug. 13 N. S.) the diary is occupied largely with brief references to the difficulties experienced by members of the Imperial Family in getting home from abroad.

CONTEMPT FOR THE
SECTSBelloc Sees Cromwell
Plainly

Mr. Hilaire Belloc's "Cromwell" is extremely well written, Bonamy Dobree says in the "Spectator," as good as anything Mr. Belloc has done.

Hilaire Belloc does not try to hide his contempt for the sects. He can give the Devil his due without for a moment blinking the fact that he is the Devil. It is a relief at last, Mr. Dobree says, to see Cromwell plain.

Mr. Lloyd George has introduced the second volume of the life of "Frederick Edwin, Earl of Birkenhead: The Last Phase," by his son, Thornton Butterworth will publish this volume soon.

While detectives searched anew for evidence in the Lindbergh kidnapping at the Hopewell, N. J., estate formerly occupied by the aviator, New Jersey State policemen maintained an extra guard and questioned all visitors, as the picture shows.

British Textiles Exhibition

and other interesting lines are the Irish peasant weave bedspreads and cloths with woven designs. These are made in fast colourings and in various shades.

The display of furnishings will be on an even better scale than last year, when it was acknowledged to be among the finest in the whole of the British Industries Fair.

During the last few years there has gradually arisen a very definite contemporary style of British furnishings, and to-day this feature is pronounced and is being followed abroad. The new style is very becoming and truly reflects the feeling of the age. The purely geometric styles are definitely on the wane, though they still appear in conjunction with artistic floral designs. In this connection the stimulus given by the preparations for the Royal Academy Exhibition of Art in Industry, which is to be held in London in February, has undoubtedly been of assistance in encouraging British firms to turn out more original and better finished work.

Printed Linens

Printed linens will be well to the fore at the White City and in many cases these have taken the place of cretonne. In rough weaves they will also be prominent. The crushed effect in cotton and rayon pile velvets as shown on previous occasions has now been combined with a brushing effect which gives a much improved appearance.

There has been a remarkable development in the use of Scotch tweed for upholstery. It is found to be very economical, and manufacturers can supply curtain material.

Artificial pearls made their first appearance in Paris in 1680. Invented by a French rosary maker, however, it was left to the Japanese to invent the method of inducing the oyster to produce a pearl at the will of man, which in no way should differ from the natural pearl.

When a pearl is produced naturally by the oyster, it is the result of an injury done to the shell, by a terials—some of them so fine as to be almost like lace—in much lighter weights to match the upholstery. The display of furnishings should certainly not be missed.

British manufacturers realise that greater stability, both in the political and economic spheres, will bring increased opportunities for trade development. As part of their constant endeavour to keep prices within the purchaser's means, they have been engaged for some time on schemes for greater co-ordination, which will, it is confidently believed, lead to more efficient working and so to reduction of cost.

The Department of Overseas Trade has made arrangements under which visitors from overseas and those passing through Europe may obtain substantial travel concessions varying from 10 per cent. to as much as 33.1/3rd per cent. in the cost of fares by rail, sea or air, and also for free passport visas. Particulars of these concessions will be available in due course from any British Embassy or Legation or British Consular officer.

News of the death of Mrs. Dyer, wife of Mr. R. M. Dyer, former Chief Manager of the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock and Company, in London on Saturday, has been received in the Colony.

During her lengthy residence in the Colony, which she left in 1932 when her husband went on retirement, Mrs. Dyer made hosts of friends in the course of her numerous social activities.

Swifter Air Mails Imperative

The most striking result of the England-Australia air-race was probably never in the mind of the generous donor of the prize.
It has made the problem of Empire Mails a live political question, demanding immediate decision. The stimulus of a thrilling race has accomplished what no paper demonstration, however convincing, could hope to achieve. It has roused a sluggish public opinion from its torpor, and, judging by the lively interest taken by Dominion statesmen at all Imperial Conferences in the All Red Route, we do not doubt that the reaction of the Dominions will be the same.
The Dutch fliers have shown that Melbourne is within four days' reach of London by airliner. Whether a regular air-service is practicable on a four-day schedule, may be disputed.
What is not disputable, however,
is that the twelve and a half day schedule between London and Brisbane, announced by Imperial Airways for next month, now appears impossibly sluggish and slow.

No one can doubt after this race that the mail transport of the near future will be air transport, and that the old monopoly of the fast mail steamer is doomed.
That is a serious outlook for British shipping companies, but the world moves on. The weight of the first-class mails from Great Britain to the Dominions is at present 1,650 tons per annum; and the return tonnage 950 tons. That represents a weekly outgoing tonnage of 32 tons and an incoming tonnage of 18. Within a short time most of it will be carried by air, unless differential rates lengthen
the transition period.

We hope the British Government will show the largeness of vision for which the occasion calls. The pace has been forced but we must either respond or fall far away behind. We have gone on in a leisurely way, content with accelerations which seemed—and indeed were—remarkable in themselves, but which are now revealed to be totally inadequate. It is not the fault of Imperial Airways, which has built up a splendid reputation for safety, and now has a well established organisation quite adequate to the requirements of the problem. Improved schedules are all a question of increased subsidies. The figures showing the civil aviation subsidies paid by the United States and by Great Britain speak for themselves. Whereas the United States Post Office air mail subsidy for 1933 amounted to $2-206,310, the entire civil aviation subsidy of Great Britain was $637,000. It is no mere coincidence, therefore, that the Dutch fliers were using a United States

'plane, itself the product of a large subsidy. The Cabinet Committee, which was appointed to consider the subsidies to Imperial Airways due to expire in 1936 and 1939, must quit that distant future for the actual present, and decide what subsidies shall be given here and now to meet a pressing challenge.

ALLEGED ASSAULT New Charges Preferred In High Street Case

HOTEL MANAGER WOUNDED

On the application of Mr. T.
P. K. Kemble, solicitor for the prosecution, three new charges were preferred against Ho Lam-sang, Pui Fong and Kwan Yu, alias Kwan Ng, for the alleged assault with intent to commit a felony, on Ma Tau-nam, manager of the Empress Hotel, on the morning of November 16, at High Street, before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy this morning.

The original charge of assault with intent to commit a felony was amended to "did assault Ma Tau-nam with intent to rob complainant at High Street."
The new charges were: (a) Unlawfully and maliciously did wound the complainant, (b) Kwan Yu only, aiding and abetting the first two defendants, to wound maliciously the complainant, (c)
Being in possession of offensive weapons—two knives, a toy pistol, a bottle, and a pad of wool.
It will be recalled that on the morning of November 16, Ma Tau-nam was on his way home from his office when he was accosted by three Chinese on the staircase, leading to his apartment at No.
4, High Street. Knives and a toy pistol were pointed at him when he offered resistance.

The case was remanded until Wednesday and Thursday.

The forthcoming wedding is announced of Mr. William James Lockhart Smith, Assistant Crown Solicitor, widower, to Miss Mabel Dundonald Green, nurse of the War Memorial Hospital, Hong Kong.

HERE, THERE and EVERYWHERE

WOMEN LIKE ECONOMICS

Recent examinations for the higher appointments in Whitehall have shown that women candidates are tackling the most abstruse subjects. One, for instance, took moral philosophy, metaphysics, political theory and logic. Economics, however, is their favourite subject. It is more popular with the women than with the men.

At the examination for inspectors of income-tax 31 out of the 69 University women who competed chose economics from the optional subjects. It was selected by four of the five successful women, and only by 12 of the 26 successful men.
The first woman in the list got 70 per cent. marks. Another, who got the 20th place, got 74 per cent. The highest score by any woman was 76 per cent.

The man who won the tenth place was awarded 69 per cent. Two other men in the successful list made only 66 per cent. and 62 per cent.

POT AND KETTLE

The headmaster of Eton, speaking on over-co-operative schools, quoted disapprovingly a school where a notice was put up saying:
"All boys in the school will watch
the First XI match this afternoon.
Good fielding will be applauded."

At Eton, it is compulsory to watch and cheer house football matches, although no one is beaten for not doing so. The cheering is a morose ceremony, as the battle-cry has to be the name of the house tutor with an S and an apostrophe on the end.

As a large number of tutorial names end in S anyway, the cheering becomes sibilant; and a sibilant cheer is an anachronism.

I defy anybody to work great enthusiasm into shouting the word
"Ho-Jones's."

Your Daily Smile!

Two old countrymen were talking about the son of another village.
"Aye," said one, "he be doin' very well in London, writin' for the papers and magazines. But his stuff is anonymous."
"Anonymous?" queried the other.
"Why, I've read a lot by him and never realised who he was."

The Difference
Some motorists can be 30 miles on a gallon, and many hikers 20 on a pint.

Once Enough
The busy executive was being shaved.
"Shall I go over it again?" inquired the barber.
"No," said the customer, "I heard it all the first time."

The visitor was much impressed with little Joan's hair.
"What lovely curly locks," she said.
"You must get those from your mother."
"No," said Joan, "They must be from Daddy. His have all gone."

MARSEILLES, CITY OF RIDDLES QUEEN AMONG CITIES DESPITE FAULTS GATEWAY OF EUROPE

(By Sir Percival Phillips)

Marseilles. WORLD-WIDE notoriety has been the unenviable lot of Marseilles since the assassination of King Alexander and M. Bar-thou. Its reputation, never of the best, is far from being enhanced by these murders.

People who know it only at second hand are asking, not unnaturally, what manner of city is this great Mediterranean port and playground of the long-distance traveller, through which hundreds of Britons pass yearly to and fro on the world's highways.

The question cannot be answered in a single sentence. Marseilles is a curious city, difficult of analysis because of its confusing and perplexing personality. Its 900,000 inhabitants—nearly a million and a quarter if the adjacent suburbs are included—embrace as hard-working industrialists and artisans as any community in Europe—and also some of the choicest criminals of every type that can be found out of prison.

It is a city both serious and frivolous in the extreme, charming in many of its aspects and sinister in others; a collection of palaces jutting with those of the Bois de Boulogne and of foul slums housing rare specimens of the underworld; a melting pot of humanity in which the predominant Midi strain of Frenchman mingles with the diverse elements of East and West; a hybrid among cities which cannot be appraised according to ordinary values.

Its contradictory traits confront
the observer on every hand.

He finds the people hospitable to excess and predatory in an accomplished way. He meets solid citizens of the highest rectitude rubbing shoulders with gangsters and the agents of every form of commercialised vice. He senses a fine civic spirit which is expressed in the development of commerce and industry and the creation of magnificent buildings, boulevards, and public works.

Two Deceptive Faces

In short, a city which is generous, open-handed, cheerful in misfortune, a connoisseur in food and drink—and adept in the pleasant profession of getting money for nothing.

The exiled Britons who use Marseilles as a gateway of Europe
it presents two faces, both deceptive.

If homeward bound he welcomes the lively harbour and the bustle of the Cannebiere, one of the finest streets in Europe, as the prelude to well-earned leave.
He spends money lavishly, and the parasites in his path evoke no resentment.

If outward bound their forays on his residue of cash convince him that he is among thieves, and he sails away filled with bitterness.

The composite picture left on his mind is a muddle of touts, rapacious cabmen, and whining beggars washed up by the seven seas, dubious film shows, and con-scienceless money changers.

Which is not the true picture of Marseilles.
The Marseillais is an original creature. He is the Irishman of France, less combative but as highly conversational and vivacious, with a dry wit and a highly developed inventive faculty, which latter trait has given the city one of its many nicknames: "The joke factory of France." It is difficult for a stranger to tell when a Marseillais is serious or merely jesting unless he is acquainted with the local temperament.

One of the more respectable jokes illustrating the Marseilles form of humour concerns a conversation between ex-Service men from Toulouse, Bordeaux, and Marseilles on their exploits in the war. The Toulouse man boasts of having killed three of the enemy with a single shot; the Bordeaux man caps this by describing how he bayoneted twenty of them in a trench. Asked what he did in the way of heroic exploits, the Marseillais replies: "Nothing. I was killed in August 1914."

Good Sportsmen

The Marseillais are good sportsmen in their own peculiar way.
They are as keen on Rugby football as any British crowd.

Yet they love the un-English sport of bull-fighting, which is practised in a manner calculated to make a Spaniard shudder in disgust. The bulls have padded horns, and free-for-all prizes are offered on the spur of the moment to members of the audience who will enter the arena and remove a paper cockade stuck to the bull's forehead. The spectacle of a fat man, slightly inebriated, engaging in this uncertain adventure and being chased by the infuriated animal seeds the spectators into a frenzy of delight.

Drones there are in hundreds,
but behind the mask of laziness are also many active minds engaged in business transactions involving thousands of pounds.

These may have to do with the consignments of silk and rice from China or of hard woods from Equatorial Africa. Or the subject matter may be probably involve wholesale deals in peddled drugs or the shipment of unfortunate women to the white slave markets in South America. These two latter industries still flourish.
The traffic in narcotics, despite all the efforts of the police, is maintained by highly paid agents in co-operation with seagoing accomplices who land heroin and other dope for redistribution as far away as the China coast.

The Political Racket

In politics you touch another sleazy side of Marseilles. The city has been compared to Chicago as a gangster centre, rather to Chicago's disadvantage, but it is equally true that its political bosses can give points to any American professionals and beat them at their own game. All the adroit legal—and illegal—tricks devised to ensure the stability of a political machine have been in use for years.

Nor can it be denied that crimes of a spectacular and bizarre kind have frequently given Marseilles undesired prominence.

No other city has produced a more sensational raid than that of motor-car bandits on the General Post Office, when they cornered the employees in broad daylight and cleaned out the tills.
Bank messengers have been held up on the Cannebiere. A popular physician, Dr. Bougrat, who murdered one of his patients and hid the body in a cupboard, was sent to Devil's Island, escaped, and now enjoys a lucrative practice in Venezuela.

The spot-light of publicity will again be turned on the city when the accomplices of "Kalemen," the assassin of King Alexander and
M. Barthou, are placed on trial.

The Marseillais are justly proud of their city. It is clean in the material sense, and is being constantly improved. Costly schemes have been carried out for the extension of the port and the addition of well-planned modern suburbs. An underground water-

LORD NUFFIELD'S "FIGHT"

Night Bus Invasion Recalled

SAVED HIGH STREET FROM TRAMS

How Oxford's High-street—"the most beautiful street in the world"—was once about to be disfigured by electric trams, standards and wires, was told by Lord Nuffield last month.

Lord Nuffield was speaking at a Grosvenor House luncheon given in his honour by Morris distributors. They presented him with a silver model of a Morris Ten-Four saloon to mark his elevation to the peerage.

Lord Nuffield told how (as Mr. William Morris) he compelled Oxford City Council in 1913 to provide the city with a motor-bus service. The council wanted electric trams.

"I applied for a licence to run 'buses,'" continued Lord Nuffield, "but I did not even get a reply. I was not putting up with that."

"So I bought a fleet of 'buses,' and arranged for them to arrive at night, so that they should not be seen until a perfect service was ready. I engaged L.G.O.C. drivers from London."

Detective On Every Bus

"Next morning a perfect motor-bus service was in operation. Within an hour there was a detective on every bus, asking who had put them on the road."

"The only way I could obviate getting into gaol was not taking any money on the 'buses.' Instead of tickets we sold coupons in the shops along the routes."

"The council took the opinion of two K.C.s. Both said, 'Look him up.' But the council replied, 'We are afraid to.' The whole population of Oxford wanted 'buses,' not electric trams."

The council then started to run 'buses' also. But Lord Nuffield had twice as many on the road, and he ordered his drivers to drive one in front and one behind each council bus. The result was that the council 'buses' did not have a single passenger.

Eventually, the council made him an offer which just about covered his expenditure.

"I can tell you now," confessed Lord Nuffield, "that if they had not bought the 'buses' when they did I should have been 'bust'."

(Laughter.) Another of Lord Nuffield's reminiscences was of his early days as a cycle manufacturer. He was exhibiting two models at the Crystal Palace, but four days before the show opened the material for his exhibits had not been delivered.

"I worked two days and two nights at the bench, without any sleep at all," he said. "I arrived at Fiddington with the machine, sent them on to the Crystal Palace, and started myself by the Inner Circle because I had not the money for a taxi."

"The next thing I remember

Marilyn Miller, who was Mary Reynolds before she wed Frank Carter, comedian, and later was wife of Jack Pickford, is honeymooning now with husband No. 3. He is Chester O'Brien, who was a chorus-boy in the last show in which his wife appeared. She is in the thirties, while he is 25.

TWILIGHT IN THE HEART

Appeal For Rose Day Support

(CONTRIBUTED.)

"There is twilight in our cells as there is always twilight in our hearts."

The idea from Oscar Wilde's De Profundis has always appealed to me as awakening one of the most pathetic chords in human life. A prison is a collection of dark cells, but the darkest corner in the cells is the corner of the human heart unlit by sympathy and love. In it is always twilight if there be not the night of despair.

Why should this be? Criminals? Yes, but what makes the criminal? Most of us never pause to think. Most of us have never reflected that we are moving, without seeing them, in the midst of those whose lives have been cast from childhood in a twilight of poverty which can darken only too easily into the twilight of crime. Still less have we thought that many of our happy bargains are the work of weary fingers, fingers of the old that should be past the evening of work and fingers of the young that should be too tender to work.

"Mother, I cannot mind my wheel; My fingers ache, my lips are dry; Oh! if you felt the pain I feel! But, oh! who ever felt as I?"

Out of this twilight arise our social problems: out of our social problems come wars and chaos. What if you could help to send a ray of light into the homes of twilight? What if you could plant a rosebud of sympathy to unfold where otherwise no roses grow?

But you can. You can do this. The "Rose Day" appeal comes to tell you so.

"What a horrible day! It is so dark, so misty! It makes you feel sad!" How often do we hear that exclamation on the dull days that visit us from time to time. But what about those who never—no, never—have bright days in the miserable room, often the mere corner of a room, which is the only spot in Hong Kong they can call their home? And it is not their home. Tomorrow, if the weary toll of their fingers cannot scrape up the few cents to pay for new feet of floor space, they will have no home; they will wander through the streets hungering. Hungering for a meal? Yes, that too, but, oh, hungering far more for the sympathy of those who can express their thoughts only in a ten cent piece on Rose Day. Reader, buy a Rose, won't you? Let the warmth of your heart determine its value.

"Love seetheth hot tidily to please, Nor for itself hath any care, But for another gives its ease, And builds a Heaven in hell's despair."

was waking up, still at Paddington, with a porter shaking me and asking: 'How many more times are you going round, gov'nor?' (Laughter.)

"Got those machines to the Crystal Palace just a quarter of an hour before the time limit."

Mr. Gordon Stewart, presiding at the luncheon, paid a tribute to Lord Nuffield's pioneer work for the motor industry.

"TARZAN AND HIS MATE"—MAJESTIC THEATRE

Johnny Weissmuller, America's retired swimming champion, and Maureen O'Sullivan, the pretty Irish star, are starred in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new drama of the African jungle, "Tarzan and His Mate," now at the Majestic Theatre.

Johnny Weissmuller makes an ideal Tarzan, but Maureen O'Sullivan deserves the highest honours. She is pursued by savage lions up a cliff, tossed like an adagio dancer from the tops of trees, somersaults on the trapeze with apes to catch her—just one daring feat after another.

"TWENTY THOUSAND YEARS IN SING SING"—ORIENTAL THEATRE

A grim and realistic drama of prison life is portrayed in First National's production, "Twenty Thousand Years in Sing Sing."

The story, which was adapted from the book by Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Sing Sing Prison, is that most remarkable dramatization of human emotions ever made.

Spencer Tracy is in the leading role of Convict Tom Connors, a "big shot" of the underworld, who was eventually sent to the electric chair for a crime he never committed. Miss Bette Davis, playing opposite Tracy, lends excellent support.

BRIDGE NOTES

be futile as it would be playing the Declarer's game, and a spade is the only lead that appears harmless on the surface.

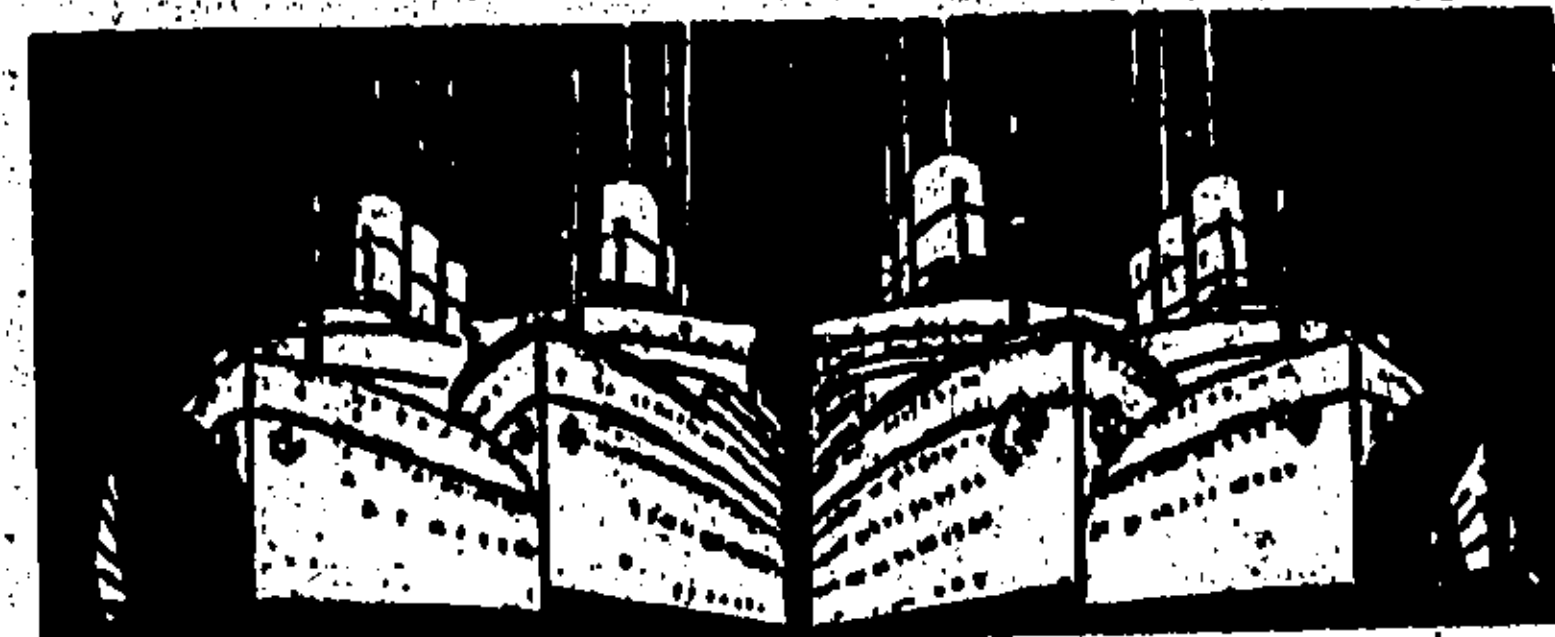

This was the lead chosen by East, but South now easily made his contract. The one round of trumps had aided him materially from a standpoint of time as it removed an exit card from the East hand when the spade finesse failed. Now South's trump fortress was strong enough to resist the menace of West's length in the trump suit.

This was the method of play adopted by which the contract was made. The hand, however, as I said, was played in duplicate, and the Opening lead in all cases was the same.

Where players sought to increase the small number of entries in the South hand by leading a club on the second round, the contract was defeated as West, after winning the first club lead, with the Ace when the Queen was played from the South hand at once returned the suit, and the Declarer could not avoid a Force in the club suit, which wrecked the possibility of making for odd.

The hand is a simple one, but it presents powerfully that lesson which we all have to learn and learn again, and that is that we, as Declarer, should make a plan as soon as we see our combined hands—the moment we have had an opportunity to take an accurate count of our combined strength and weakness. In making a plan every feature should be taken into account and every unfavourable break that can be discounted should be discounted.

MEMORIAL TO MORRIS

Mr. Bernard Shaw last month opened a hall at Kelmscott, Gloucestershire, as a memorial to William Morris. The hall was packed, and shortly after the proceedings had begun a speech was interrupted, and it was announced that the Prime Minister, Mr. MacDonald, was present.

Mr. MacDonald, who went to the platform, said: "This hall is just the sort of thing that Morris himself would have liked to fashion as his own memorial. It will be not merely a local place but a point of world pilgrimage. I am glad to be here and to feel Morris's spirit and to congratulate his daughter, Miss May Morris. I know how much her heart was set upon this and now the work is done."

Mr. Bernard Shaw declared the hall open. He said that he had known many people but had never met anyone quite like William Morris.

"I should unhesitatingly say that the one category in which you could put Morris was that of a saint," he continued. "And I should say that in a more sensible age he would perhaps come to be called St. William of Kelmscott. I think the thing that makes me classify him as a saint was that he did not get his knowledge and wisdom through the ordinary channels."

William Morris was an M.A. of Oxford, and the only time I ever heard him express a grudge of money spent was for the twenty guineas for his M.A. degree.

"Oxford can do many wonderful things, but it cannot turn out a man like Morris, except in the sense of turning him out of the door."

World-Wide Tribute

Morris, the centenary of whose birth was celebrated in March, lived for a long time at the Manor House at Kelmscott, and it was for this reason that the village was chosen as the place for the memorial. Miss May Morris, his daughter, lives at the Manor. Subscriptions for the memorial, which consists of a main hall, a reading room, and a games room, have come from all parts of the world. The site was given by the late Lord Farington, and only local materials and labour have been used in the building.

The stone comes from Sir Stafford Cripps's quarry at Filkins, and the timber was taken from local trees, it is hoped later to lay out a bowling green in the grounds of the hall.

Among those who took part in the ceremony were Miss May Morris, Sir William Rothenstein, Dr. J. W. Mackail, author of the biography of Morris, Mr. C. W. Nevill, and Dr. H. A. L. Fisher, Warden of New College, Oxford.

Left To Cuthbert

"There they be!—The whole lot of 'em be 'sited on the far ridge. That's where another road. 'We'd better hurry—"

"Gotcher! You're prisoners!" a triumphant voice cut in; and glancing down Pearson saw four enemy scouts who had ridden up quietly behind the hedge. Three of them dismounted hurriedly, flung their reins to the fourth, and hurried forward to secure their prize.

"Damn!" said Cuthbert, fervently.

But—"Cr-r-r-ack!" said the elm tree; and the limb on which Pearson was supported snapped with a loud report, carrying him with it in crashing confusion to the ground.

Now, the four A Squadron horses were not of the same calm and "confidential" temperament as those held by Bates; and the result for the "bandit" patrol was disastrous. The horse on which No. 3 was sitting reared in alarm, and its rider found himself gazing up at its sleek and polished quarters. He had not unaturally, loosed the collected reins and the four horses promptly scattered to the four winds.

The bold bandits stared open-mouthed at this sudden reversal of fortune; then, not relishing the prospect of a walk home, cast one bitter glance on their jubilant captives and turned in weary pursuit of those rapidly diminishing steeds.

Cuthbert, whose fall had been broken by the foliage through which he had crashed, gathered himself up shaken but whole, and clambered on to his grey—to which excursions and alarms meant nothing.

"Come on!" he shouted to Bates, and set off along the bridge path leading towards the spot appointed for re-joining the section.

Lance-corporal Burgess was awaiting them, and their report—which did not err on the side of modesty—was heard with interest, though also, with regrettable scepticism.

"So a whole troop tried to capture you, eh? And you jumped 60ft. out of a tree and chased 'em off! Why didn't you capture them?"

"Oo, we couldn't be bothered with prisoners," answered Cuthbert airily.

Burgess snorted.

"Well, now, as you saw the enemy, you go back to the squadron—here's where they are, look an' tell 'em the enemy are coming through on the left flank; your left—my right, see? Think of your bridle hand, and the side, your sword's on, I ain't writing no message—I always get it in the wrong order—so don't you make any mistake."

Cuthbert "buzzed", so did his head from these deceptively simple orders. "Left—right" was the refrain, his horse's hooves beat out, "my left—your—no, your left, my right—left, right, left!"

Thus angrossed, he paid little attention to his surroundings, with the natural consequence that, when rounding a corner, he came face to face with a horseman carrying a drawn sword, his nerves suffered a severe shock. But it was only the advanced point in front of his own squadron; and as his relief was equalled by the other's disappointment, honours were easy. Shortly afterwards, he met the head of the column, and approached Major Broughton.

"The enemy be comin' through on the —" he furtively dropped his hand to the hilt of his sword—"on the left, sur— that way, sur," and pointing arm indicated the direction.

"I see," said the major. "On the left—your left, eh? And my right? Very well; fall in at the rear of the squadron. That means," he went on to the second-in-command, "that they are coming along the road, Fordingley—Weston Farm—Borrington. If we turn right at the cross-roads as far as Hawkstone Down, we can occupy the ridge here, up to point 472, with the machine-guns there, and they can't possibly get through. We'll have to be quick, though. . . . March!"

And so it came about. The ridge was duly occupied, led horses sent back under cover, and the squadron waited for the enemy's arrival—and waited—and continued to wait. And nothing happened.

An hour passed. Patrols were sent out, but returned with entirely negative information.

"The other squadrons must have gone astray," suggested Captain Garratt, hopefully. "I've seen Pearson again, and he seems quite definite about his information."

Thus passed a second hour.

Then there appeared at the foot of the slope a small band of horsemen, each bearing upon his right arm a white band.

"The umpires!" And a shiver of apprehension passed through C Squadron's higher command.

"What the deuce are you doing here, John?" barked the colonel, as he and his fellow-judges reached the hill-top. "The other squadrons passed hours ago on the Midbourne road."

"According to information from my patrols, sir . . . Major Broughton explained the situation.

"Is the messenger still here? asked Colonel Blount.

"I believe so, sir . . . Sergeant-major, see if Pearson is there."

The colonel gulped.

"Pearson? Did you say Pearson? Good! Good! Peck up, John, peck up! We'll do the scheme again, to-morrow. Don't know what the hell's gone wrong but you can tell me the merry jest when you get back! Arrgh!"

"Trumpet-major, 'Cease Fire, please."

And the umpires turned away as the liting bugle notes reached out to be relayed by a squadron trumpet to the disgruntled and perplexed "bandits" gathered in deep boredom on Borrington hill.

"Well, Pearson, how the blazes have you managed to blue the whole dam' contract this time?"

"Well, sur, Corporal Burgess did tell me to tell 'em as the enemy were comin' along on the left—no, it's right, an' on my left—see! It was the end of the ridge, the ridge with the machine-guns, with 'em!"

POLICE CONSTABLE ON GRAVE CHARGE

Alleged Bribery Attempt And Assault

PERFUMERY PROPRIETOR THE COMPLAINANT

On charges of attempting to obtain a bribe of $2, and for assaulting Chan Siu Ting, proprietor of the South China Perfumery Company, Kaka Singh, police constable No. B.495, appeared before Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Mr. G. K. Hall Brutton appeared on behalf of the complainant and stated that on November 12, at about 7.15 a.m., his client took his car from the On Man garage, and drove to No. 370, Lockhart Road where he parked the car and went inside the premises on the ground floor. A few minutes later defendant beckoned him to come out, and told that his car was causing an obstruction. Defendant asked for cunshaw and said he would not take out a summons.

Complainant refused to give him the $2, and drove his car to Marsh Road, where he instructed two boys to clean it. Defendant followed and was about to arrest the boys when complainant intervened, and told him make a note of the number of the car. Defendant then caught hold of complainant's jacket, tore it, and blew his whistle.

The case was adjourned until this afternoon.

ROOSEVELT IS NOW BECOMING LESS RADICAL

Conservative developments, which are counteracting Radical moves, include:

Firstly, that the Government has turned away from further dollar juggling.

Secondly, that encouragement has been given to bankers and businessmen to join in the recovery efforts.

Thirdly, the opposition to additional silver legislation.—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

TIENTSIN SEEKING OLD STATUS

Special Municipality

Tientsin.—In view of the political and commercial importance of Tientsin in North China, Mr. Chang Ting-ao, the new Mayor of Tientsin, has petitioned the Central Government to restore the city to its old status as a Special Municipality to be placed under the direct jurisdiction of the Executive Yuan.—(Chekiat Agency).

Attention is called to the fact that the average interest rate on the public debt, at present, is 3.02 per cent., as against 3.39 per cent. on March 1, 1933.

Therefore, while the public debt has increased 29 per cent., interest charges have increased only 14.7 per cent.—United Press per S. E. Levy and Company.

RAISED BANK RATE IN ITALY MAY GO HIGHER

The Premier, Signor Benito Mussolini, is anxious as regards the adverse trade balance and the Budget deficit. He is intent on protecting the lira to prevent Italy being forced off the gold standard, unless accompanied in the process by other gold countries.

Signor Mussolini hopes to attract tourists by reducing the cost of living, and also hopes to attract foreign capital. He has long coveted some of France's huge gold reserve, and the question will come up at the forthcoming visit of the French Foreign Minister, Mr. Laval.

It is not expected, however, for political reasons, that Italy will accept a loan from France.—Reuter.
